The BLACK BAG

By Louis Joseph Vance

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

Diving into the flag, he shut the door and stuck his head out of the window, taking observations. A ragged fringe of silly rabble was bearing down upon them, with one or two gen-darmes in the forefront and a giant, who might or might not be Stryker, a close second. Furthermore, another cab seemed to have been requisitioned for the chase. His heart misgave him momentarily, but his driver had taken him at his word and generosity, and in a breath the fiacre had turned the corner on two wheels, and the glittering reaches of the embankment, drive and promenade were dotted out, as if smudged with lampblack, by the ob-scurely of a narrow and tortuous side street.

He drew in his hand the better to preserve his brains against further emergencies.
After a block or two Kirkwood picked up the gladstone bag, gently opened the door and put a foot on the step, pausing to look back. The other cab was pelting after him with all the enthusiasm of a bound on a fresh trail.
He reflected that this mad progress through the thoroughfares of a civilized city would not long endure without police intervention. So he waited, watching his opportunity. The fiacre hurled onward, the driver leaning forward from his box to urge the horse with lash of whip and tongue, entirely unconscious of his fare's intentions.

Between two streets the mouth of a narrow and darksome byway flashed into view. Kirkwood threw wide the door and leaped, trusting to the night to hide his stratagem, to luck to save his limbs. Neither failed him. In a twinkling he was on all fours in the mouth of the alley, and as he picked himself up the second fiacre passed.
Calendar himself poking a round bald tween boat and brigantine.

pull out of the window to help his driver's capidity with promises of redoubled fare.

Kirkwood mopped his dripping forehead and whistled low with dismay.
It seemed that from that instant on it was to be a vendetta with a vengeance.
Calendar, as he had foreseen, was stopping at nothing.

At a dog trot he sped down the alley to the next street, on which he turned back—more sedately—toward the river, debouching on the esplanade just one block from the Hotel du Commerce.
As he swung past the hurried tables of a cafe whither tears he had harbored were banished by the discovery that the excitement occasioned by the chase had already subsided. Beneath the garish awnings the crowd was laughing and chattering, eating and sipping its beer with complete uncon-cern, heedless altogether of the haggard and shabby young man carrying a black hand bag. Without attracting any attention whatever, indeed, he mingled with the strolling crowd, making his way toward the Hotel du Commerce. Yet he was not at all at ease. His uneasy conscience invested the gladstone bag with a magnetic attraction for the public eye. To carry it unconcealed in his hand fur-lashed him with a sensation as disturbant as though his worn black sides had been stenciled "Stolen!" In letters of flame. He felt it rendered him a synonym of public interest, an object of suspicion to the wide, cold world; that the gaze which lit upon the bag traveled to his face only to espy thereon the brand of guilt.

For ease of mind presently he turned into a convenient shop and spent ten invaluable francs for a hand satchel big enough to hold the gladstone bag.
